New Dimensions of Chinese Foreign Policy

Edited by Sujian Guo and Shiping Hua

“This is a timely and rewarding treatise on new trends in China’s foreign policy. The book will help both scholars and practitioners gain an understanding of the changing strengths and weaknesses of Chinese foreign policy and their implications for the global community. As such, the volume is a thoughtful and provocative addition to the literature on the foreign policy of the most important country in East Asia.”

—Dennis Hickey, Missouri State University

“The authors provide theoretically sophisticated and empirically rich analysis of contemporary Chinese foreign policy. Critical dimensions examined include the changing ideology, orientation of emerging elite, ‘soft power’ in foreign policy, new diplomacy on the Korean nuclear crisis, the growing energy factor in China’s foreign policy, and the complex interdependence of China and the United States. The insightful analysis will deepen our understanding of the challenges and opportunities that come with a rising China.”

—Guoli Liu, College of Charleston

“Hu Jintao’s government espouses ‘peaceful development’ to counter U.S. reactions that might slow China’s rise. In this book, Chinese and American scholars together provide a superbly documented analysis of Hu’s policies, e.g., on N. Korean nuclearization, Taiwan non-secession (rather than immediate unification), trade and peace. Will such policies last until China’s political elite may decide to make Beijing more liberal, and thus more predictable to other liberal states? Anybody who wants clues to answer that question must read this book.”

—Lynn White, Princeton University

New Dimensions of Chinese Foreign Policy is an in-depth analysis of China’s new place in international affairs. Taking Hu Jintao’s proposal for “peaceful development” as a starting point, the contributors in this volume examine the new trends of thought in the fourth generation of Chinese policymakers. Special emphasis is placed on U.S.-China relations. Editors Sujian Guo and Shiping Hua have assembled a list of contributors—many of which are Chinese or Chinese-American scholars—with thorough knowledge of changes in Chinese foreign policy and their implications for the world. The essays contained in this volume cover a comprehensive breadth of topics, including: China’s changing ideology in foreign policy, Chinese elite perspectives on the rise of China, the political orientations of the emerging elite, social dimensions of China’s power status, “soft power” management, approaches to the North Korean nuclear issues, Middle East foreign policy, entry into WTO and foreign trade policy, changing attitudes toward international regimes, and the implications of China-U.S. interdependence.
